Local restaurants acknowledge World Aids Day

■ Twenty-four restaurants donate to SLO County AIDS Support Network

Story by Jenny Justus
Daily Staff Writer

Daily photos by Joe Johnston

In honor of World AIDS Day, 24 restaurants throughout the county donated 10 percent of their profits on Sunday to the AIDS Support Network of San Luis Obispo County.

The program, called Eat Out/Save Lives, started last year by staff and students from the Cuesta College Art Gallery.

Art Gallery Director, Marta Peluso, said letters were sent out inviting about 130 restaurants to participate in the program. Compared to last year, the number of restaurants participating has doubled this year, and Peluso said they hope the program will continue to grow.

Peluso said event organizers started earlier this year and contacted more restaurants in hopes of encouraging more participation. She said that some restaurants, like the Jewel Of India, heard about Eat Out/Save Lives and contacted them because they wanted to participate.

Peluso said the group chose to donate the profits to the AIDS Support Network because it is a county-wide organization, and the AIDS crisis is something that affects everyone.

The AIDS Support Network is the only community-based nonprofit agency in San Luis Obispo County that provides education, outreach and support to people living with AIDS and their families.

Last year Eat Out/Save Lives was able to donate $1,200 to the agency, and this year the program aims to raise $2,000, Peluso said.

Peluso said last year World AIDS Day was on a Friday, which is traditionally a day where many eat at restaurants. This year with the awareness day falling on the Sunday after Thanksgiving, Peluso was unsure of the restaurants' turnout.

"We are hoping that everyone gets sick of all that turkey and goes out to eat," Peluso said. "Especially for such a good cause."

Peluso said that the Cuesta College Art Gallery chose Eat Out/Save Lives because so many people, from the businesses to the people going out to eat can take part in the event.

"We like Eat Out/Save Lives a lot because so many people get to participate," Peluso said.

This year organizers tried to encourage participation from restaurants from various cost levels so that even if someone doesn't have a lot of money, they can still contribute to the cause.

San Luis Obispo restaurants that participated were 1865, Ben Franklin's Sandwich Company, Benvenuti, Big Sky Cafe, Buona Tavola, Caffé Brio, Jewel of India, Linnaea's Cafe, Morocco Restaurant, Natural Flavors, Nuccis and Pete's Southside Cafe.

Greg Holt, kitchen manager for Big Sky Cafe, said that the restaurant has participated in the program for the past two years to help increase AIDS awareness.

"It's a crucial thing to be involved with because it makes people aware of what we need to do to save lives," Holt said.

The total amount raised had not been calculated at press time.

AIDS Day message delivered across globe with vigor

By Sue Leeman
Associated Press

In Rome, taxi drivers distributed safe-sex leaflets. Across Thailand, gas stations offered free condoms. And in New York, activists read out the names of thousands killed by AIDS.

World AIDS Day was marked with renewed vigor around the world Sunday after a U.N. agency reported an accelerating death toll, with nearly a quarter of the 6.4 million AIDS deaths to date occurring in the past year.

This year, 3.1 million people were infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, bringing the total number of people with HIV or AIDS to 22.6 million, UNAIDS said.

Chinese activists posted photos of an emaciated AIDS victim in Beijing's central Zhongshan Park near the ancient imperial palace, along with posters that read, "The risks of careless sex and lifestyle hygiene."

Health officials warn that more than 1 million Chinese — 10 times the estimated present number — could be infected with HIV by 2000 without preventive measures.

In Thailand, which has an active sex industry, gas stations distributed 3 million condoms to customers with the warning: "Be careful of AIDS when feeling naughty." An estimated 800,000 of Thailand's 60 million people have the HIV virus, and 50,000 more have died of AIDS.

In India, which volunteer organizations say has Asia's worst AIDS epidemic with 1 million or more HIV cases, marches were held in Bombay, the financial capital.

More than 400 people gathered in Tokyo for the lighting of a 20-foot tree bearing 12,000 red ribbons, symbol of the fight against AIDS.

In Uganda, which has one of the world's highest AIDS mortality rates, the official newspaper called for intensified condom promotion campaigns. It said more men were using condoms after a nationwide anti-AIDS campaign began several years ago.

Smart family files lawsuit

By Anne Thomas
Daily Staff Writer

The family of missing Cal Poly student Kristin Smart has filed a $40 million wrongful death lawsuit against Paul Flores.

CITY

According to the San Luis Obispo County Telegram-Tribune the suit which was filed Tuesday in the San Luis Obispo Superior Court claims that Flores "intentionally inflicted emotional distress" upon Smart's parents by murdering their daughter at Cal Poly and then hiding or destroying her body.

The Telegram-Tribune also reported that the Smarts have also taken the first steps in a lawsuit against the state. They filed a claim Thursday stating that Cal Poly failed to provide a safe environment for their daughter and was negligent in its investigation of her disappearance.

Flores, the last person seen with Smart before her disappearance, has been indicted and questioned by a criminal grand jury, but has not been named as a suspect in the case or charged with any crime.

Included in the suit against Flores is an unnamed Cal Poly fraternity.

The suit alleges that although he is underage, Flores was served alcohol by the fraternity and then murdered Smart while intoxicated.

The Smarts' attorney, James Murphy, told the Telegram-Tribune that he rushed to file the suit because he heard that Flores planned to join the U.S. Navy and leave the area.

Murphy said that Kristin's parents, Stan and Denise Smart, are anxious to have Flores questioned under oath about many things he told police in the days following Smart's disappearance.

Murphy also explained that the Smarts were upset because although their daughter was last seen at approximately 2 a.m. on Saturday, May 25, her disappearance was not officially noted until the following Tuesday.

Amorous relationships policy passes

By Mary Hadley
Daily Staff Writer

Sexual relationships between professors and students are now more than simply a question of ethics. They may soon be grounds for dismissal.

CAMPUS

The Academic Senate decided last Tuesday that professors are forbidden from having amorous or sexual relationships with their students.

President Baker must still approve the policy before it goes into effect.

The Senate has been weighing the issue since September, when the policy was introduced by the Status of Women Committee.

The Policy on Amorous Relationships was not welcomed by some senate members, but after a brisk and sometimes emotional debate, the policy passed with a 24-14 vote.

The policy, modeled after the version at the University of North Carolina, includes sanctions for disciplinary actions against faculty or instructional staff caught initiating, pursuing, or being involved in "amorous or sexual relationships" with any student they are currently teaching.

The sanctions range from suspension without pay to dismissal, depending on the nature of the case.

The policy doesn't ban romantic relationships between professors and students they are not currently instructing.

"I'm in favor of a stronger policy," said Foreign Language Professor William Martinez, who was annoyed when the senate initially voted to amend the policy by taking away the sanctions.

"Having a policy without having a way of instituting it is useless," Martinez said.

Soil Science Professor Tom Ruehr asked the senate members to "take the high moral road and pass this resolution."

Math Professor George Lewis voted against the policy.

"I object to the senate addressing this," Lewis said. "I think I would support it if it consisted only of the policy statement."

Lewis said he found the whole issue "extremely distressing, distasteful, and complex."

But the complexity of the issue was no reason to abandon the policy, the majority of the senators decided.

"I cannot imagine that anyone in this room really condones this behavior," Senate Chairman and Math Professor Harvey Greenwald said. "If we don't pass this, we are sending a different message."

AIDS: Names of deceased read in New York

In New York, volunteers stood at five podiums in front of City Hall on a dark, rainy afternoon and read out the names of thousands of people who have died from the disease.

"We do it because we want to remember the people we've lost," said Ginny Shubert, who works with an AIDS services group. "We also want to remind the government that people are dying, and every day time runs out for more people that we love."

Organizers did not know how many names were read.

In New York's Times Square, an electronic billboard flashed the message: "Every second another person is infected with HIV."

In San Francisco, about 300 people gathered at a new National AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park. The 15-acre grove of redwoods, oak trees, ferns and mossy rocks was designed ated a national landmark in a bill signed by President Clinton on Nov. 12.

In a statement, Clinton said the serene sanctuary "will serve as a constant reminder of the vital work that lies before us in the battle to stop the spread of the HIV virus."

To call attention to AIDS among American Indians, a sculpture was shrouded in black nylon outside Phoenix's Heard Museum, renowned for its collection of Indian art. AIDS cases among Native Americans in the United States have doubled in three years, to 1,439 this year.

In Paris, several hundred AIDS activists marched with signs reading, "AIDS: The Epidemic Isn't Over" and "Zero Equals the Number of AIDS Survivors."

In Rome, two taxi companies distributed AIDS information

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

People, please!

Editor,

I think this racism/sexism issue is getting just a LITTLE out of hand. Mr. Bourzac's article on gay couples seemed to be the key to a locked door. When that door opened, people poured in like obnoxious cockroaches with their opinions.

And that's just fine. I'm glad people have opinions. In fact, having an opinion is one of those things that sets us apart from our furry little friends.

But these ideas of moving into a more "politically correct" era are just a bit too much for me to grasp. Take the other day, for example. While I waited for the correspondence director to drop off my mail I watched the sanitation engineer picking up last night's pizza boxes. What happened to the friendly mailman and garbageman?

No, guys, wait. I'm generalizing against women. Let's try males and females — no, that leaves out transvestites. How about Homo Sapiens? Can we all agree on that one? This whole idea of discrimination has already gone too far.

The Chiefs, Patriots, Redskins, mailmen, and garbagemen are just names. They aren't meant to discriminate against anyone or make one group feel more inferior to another. So stop this "name changing" and just take things for what they are.

What, you think that's funny?

Editor,

The Mustang Daily is not a paper I often read. Recently, I was reminded why. I was dismayed when I saw a construction site pictured on the front page on Nov. 26 with such negative remarks written below it.

Mustang Daily criticized the appearance of the site sarcastically. It's senseless to think that anyone enjoys the scenery of construction. If asked, I'm sure we would all say we would like to have our orderly campus back.

However, I have faith that Cal Poly's decision to upgrade utilities is in the best interest of the university. This is a state school that seems conscious of its physical appearance and certainly would not allow a "cesspool" on campus under any normal circumstances.

Projects like these are part of maintaining a college campus and I think Utilidor has done an excellent job of keeping students informed. After all, it was a letter from Utilidor that ran recently in the Mustang Daily that offered coherent explanation of the project's motives and concerns. Utilidor offers us information, which is more than I can say for the Mustang Daily.

COMMENTARY

Skateboarding is not a crime

By Kevin Mann

I am a freshman here at Cal Poly. Upon my arrival to this beautiful campus, I was initially impressed by the many sports and recreational activities that are available here. Basketball or racquetball players would find themselves at home here with and abundance of courts to use. I, however, am a skateboarder.

To my dismay I have found that it is illegal to skateboard anywhere on campus. Because I live on campus, participating in my sport has become a problem.

After considering the situation, I can see two possible solutions to the dilemma: Cal Poly should either legalize skateboarding on campus or designate a particular area, such as a skate park, for skateboarders to use.

I first realized that it is illegal to skateboard on campus when some friends and I were confronted by a campus police officer. We were riding our boards near Building 52 when the officer approached us and said skateboarding is illegal everywhere on campus. He said that if we were caught riding again our boards would be confiscated and we would each get a citation. When we asked why it was illegal to skate, the officer said it was because of liability costs, meaning that we could hurt ourselves and then sue the university.

This response didn't make sense to me because skateboarding is no more dangerous than other school-promoted sports like football, soccer or basketball. However, injuries in these sports have not resulted in them being banned from the campus.

In another situation, a determined friend of mine was skating when he saw police officers. He then decided it would be best if he simply left the scene, rather than confront the police a second time. Later that evening, my friend chose to go and talk to the officer he saw and try to work out the current problem regarding skateboarding.

However, when he found this officer, something went drastically wrong. Instead of working out the problem by talking, the officer proceeded to write my friend a citation for skating earlier that evening. Because my friend took the initiative to find the officer with the purpose of talking rationally, I feel that the citation was neither justified or fair.

There is no reason that skateboarding should be completely banned from our campus. It is a sport that is enjoyed by too many people, for both recreation and transportation, to simply outlaw it all together. A simple solution would be to let skateboarders skate on campus without the threat of a citation. If the school still feels that this is a bad idea, then a skateboarding facility should be provided. It is only fair that skateboarders be allowed to participate in the sport they love.

Kevin Mann is a freshman who declines to state his major.

Go virtual, baby

Editor,

It was quite interesting to read an article about an English course that is planned to be offered through the Internet. I think this will be a great chance to test out the so-called "virtual class" that we have been hearing about for quite some time now. It is a big step towards the future of education, where students will not be limited to the information in a class room, but to an unlimited information available throughout the world.

Computers have become necessary in today's education and I believe the interaction between students, schools, and resources of different countries will be the next major step in associating computers with our education.

I'm sure there are numerous criticisms about this new idea but I believe that with the fast improving technologies, it won't be long before the impossible will be possible. Whether it is a discussion class or a hands-on lab, soon we will be able to educate ourselves in the comfort of our home.

I wish the new class a good luck and hope that it will be a success.

Vampire cult town withers under national spotlight

By David Rotse
Associated Press Writer

MURRAY, Ky. — For years, this quiet college town was perhaps best known as home of the national Boy Scout museum. Now it is newly notorious, and its residents increasingly afraid, with the discovery that some of its teens belonged to a vampire cult.

AP-NATION

The news that four area teenagers are suspected of beating a Florida couple to death was frightening enough. Now prosecutors say the youths were involved in a strange role-playing game that went much too far — from the mutilation of animals to drinking each other's blood and eventually to murder.

Few would discuss the case with outsiders, but the cult was the hot topic of hushed gossip among residents.

"People are talking about it," said Greg Duncan, sipping coffee at the Hungry Bear restaurant. "Some people are afraid."

Details remain sketchy but the secretive cult known as "The Vampire Clan" is believed to have been active in Murray, where members were suspected of breaking into an animal shelter and mutilating two puppies.

"The fear of the unknown is always greater than the fear of the known," said another man at the Hungry Bear, who refused to give his name.

Murray, a semi-rural town of about 13,000, lies in southwestern Kentucky near the Tennessee state line. Murray State University is there, a 8,300-student school known for its basketball program.

Now the town is linked to three Murray teens arrested along with another youth from nearby Mayfield. All four, along with the daughter of the slain couple, were arrested on Thanksgiving night in Baton Rouge, La. All are suspected in the Nov. 25 slayings of Richard and Naoma Wendorf of Eustis, Fla.

Police say Rod Ferrell met the Wendorf's 15-year-old daughter, Heather, when he lived in Eustis with his father. Ferrell, 16, moved back to Murray last year to live with his mother.

It was Ferrell who police think broke into the animal shelter, stomping one dog to death and pulling the legs off another. Neighbors at the public housing complex where he lived say they never noticed anything unusual about him or his mother, Sondra Gibson.

Yet Ms. Gibson is herself charged with solicitation to commit rape. Police say she wrote to a 14-year-old, inviting sex and hinting she was involved in vampire-type activity.

"I longed to be near you ... to become a Vampire, a part of the family immortal and truly yours forever," the letter reads. "You will then come for me and cross me over and I will be your bride for eternity and you my sire."

Accused with Ferrell and Ms. Wendorf of killing the Wendorfs are Dana Cooper, 19, of Murray, and Scott Anderson, 16, of Mayfield. Charity Keesee, 16, of Murray was charged with being an accessory to murder.

Extradition proceedings in Baton Rouge are to begin Monday.

Calloway County prosecutor David Harrington described Ms. Cooper as a "follower, someone who wanted to be liked. Probably easily manipulated."

A young woman stopped in a grocery store who graduated from Calloway County High School with Ms. Cooper last year said the girl craved attention.

"But this vampire stuff?" she asked, refusing to give her name. "There was nothing that suggested that. She was just strange."

Harrington said the youths were involved in an on-going role-playing game, but that Ferrell had begun to take the vampire game more seriously, scaring others into quitting.

"The animal shelter thing was the first visible sign he had gone beyond game-playing," Harrington said, refusing to disclose more details because the

President Baker's Call for Help

Dear Cal Poly Student:

Kristin Denise Smart, a 19 year old Cal Poly student, disappeared under suspicious circumstances while returning to her campus residence hall from an off-campus party in the early morning hours of Saturday, May 25, 1996. She was in the company of a male Cal Poly student at the time she was last seen. Her disappearance is still under investigation by the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department.

I urge you to report any information bearing upon this case to either Crimestoppers (at 1-800-549-7867) or the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department (at 805-781-4500). You may remain anonymous, if you wish, in contacting either of these numbers. A poster with additional information about Kristin and the circumstances of her disappearance is enclosed. If you have any information about her disappearance or the events leading up to it, even information that may seem insignificant to you, please share it with the authorities. It may help them resolve this case.

While the mystery of Kristin's disappearance is unresolved, the University is examining this case closely to learn as much as possible from it and to identify ways of preventing a tragedy such as this from occurring again on the Cal Poly campus. This year we have already taken additional steps to enhance campus safety and security.

With the aid of a $150,000 grant from the federal government, we are hiring two new public safety officers. With their help, we are instituting a number of proactive campus public safety efforts. We are establishing a new police "substation" in Tenaya Hall. We are also implementing new outreach programs to assist students with issues such as personal safety and property crime prevention. Foot patrols and bike patrols have also been strengthened this year.

An additional federal grant, from the Fund for Improvement of Post-Secondary Education, has permitted us to launch the new "VIP Program." This program has created an organization of 60 high-profile student leaders and an advisory group of 15 staff and faculty members. The program will have a special emphasis on reducing the incidence of alcohol- and drug-related crime. The VIP organization will train student leaders to identify and refer students with alcohol problems, conduct a campuswide educational campaign and sponsor alcohol-free recreational events.

The University will continue to explore additional ways of enhancing campus safety and security. In the final analysis, though, this must be a shared responsibility, and I urge you to join the administration, faculty, staff and your fellow students in helping to promote a safe campus environment.

In closing, I would like to entreat you again to report to the authorities any information you may have about Kristin Smart's disappearance or the events leading up to it. For the sake of Kristin and her family, please help bring this tragic episode to a close.

Sincerely,

Warren J. Baker
President

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tiny Tim, the ukulele-plunking crooner who bemused and amused millions by trilling the whimsical love ditty "Tiptoe Thru' the Tulips," died after falling ill as he

Tiny Tim, who had a history of heart trouble, was stricken Saturday night during a benefit for the Women's Club of Minneapolis. His widow, Susan Khaury, said he cut short "Tulips" and told her he was not well. She was trying to help him back to their table when he collapsed.

"I don't think he had time to feel pain," Mrs. Khaury said Sunday. "He died singing 'Tiptoe Thru' the Tulips,' and the last thing he heard was the applause, and the last thing he saw was me."

Tiny Tim died at a Minneapolis hospital late Saturday. A hospital spokeswoman said the cause apparently was cardiac arrest, but a final determination would be made later.

He said a few weeks ago that he was born April 12, 1932, making him 64, although over the years he had sometimes fibbed or hedged about his age.

Born Herbert Khaury, Tiny Tim built his career on his single hit song in 1968, his stratospheric falsetto, an asexual and childlike stage persona and a flair for self-promotion.

The 6-foot-1 entertainer with long, frizzy hair was given his stage name in 1960 by an agent who had been working with midget acts. He made his first national television appearance on "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-in."

In an era of acid-tinged performers such as Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and Led Zeppelin, the older Tiny Tim seemed to offer a benign, comic foil. "Tiptoe Thru' the Tulips" dates from the late '20s, but Tiny Tim appropriated the song on behalf of the flower generation.

"He would sing in this very high voice and play his ukulele and act like a child almost. If we had renegade rockers on one side, he was the other side," said T. Dennis Brown, a historian of American popular music at the University of Massachusetts.

His 1969 marriage to Vicki Budinger on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" attracted an audience of 40 million viewers. They had a daughter, Tulip Victoria, before they divorced.

Though known for his falsetto, he also sometimes sang in a baritone. His albums include "God Bless Tiny Tim," "Prisoner of Love," "Rock," and "Girl."

In recent years, he found an audience with the retro-music crowd and an enthusiastic welcome from broadcast hosts, including Howard Stern and Conan O'Brien. He moved to Minneapolis in 1995 after marrying his third wife.

Tiny Tim had suffered from congestive heart failure, diabetes and other problems. He fell off a stage on Sept. 28 after suffering a heart attack during a ukulele festival in Massachusetts and was hospitalized for 11 days.

"If I live 10 years, it's a miracle. Five years, it's even more of a miracle," Tiny Tim said after his release.

His doctors warned him he might live only another year or two.

"I am ready for anything that happens," he said. "Death is never polite, even when we expect it. The only thing I pray for is the strength to go out without complaining."

Mrs. Khaury said she had urged him to rest, but Saturday's performance was his third since the heart attack.

"I don't think there's anything more I could have done to stop him," she said, adding that he was "pretty lackadaisical" about taking his medicine.

Tiny Tim once told an interviewer, "Don't bury me with anyone old." A funeral was scheduled for Wednesday in Minneapolis.

Eurotunnel stages test evacuation for passenger service

By Joseph Schuman
Associated Press

PARIS — Hoping to prove the Channel Tunnel's safety two weeks after a fire shut down service, operators sent a passenger train on a test run Sunday and staged a mock evacuation midway through.

AP-WORLD

The 450 transit workers enlisted for the test walked about a mile to reach emergency shuttles, emerging on the English side of the channel more than two hours after the train stopped.

"It took a long time because they had to walk a long way first," Eurotunnel spokeswoman Annabel Salmon said.

But asked whether the test incorporated the problem of smoke — which caused all the injuries in the tunnel fire earlier this month — Salmon said she didn't know.

The Nov. 18 fire broke out on a truck aboard a car and truck-hauling train, injuring eight people and raising questions about emergency procedures in the tunnel beneath the water separating England and continental Europe.

The test was requested by the Anglo-French government Safety Authority, which must approve the reopening of passenger service through the tunnel. Limited freight runs resumed last week through the intact track of the twin tunnels under the sea. There is also a third service tunnel.

The test train left Folkstone, England, and stopped 19 miles into the 31-mile tunnel.

Salmon refused to evaluate the test's results, but said passenger service would resume "as soon as they give us the go-ahead."

"We can't pass judgment on the exercise. We have to wait and see what the Safety Authority says about it," she said.

Eurotunnel has said the cause of the blaze remained a mystery, and that the company awaited the findings of a French judge investigating the blaze. Officials have not ruled out arson.

Eurotunnel has said a complete resumption of service is going to have to wait for the necessary repairs, expected to take three to five months.

The tunnel has been in operation for two years, carrying rail traffic between England and France.

Clue inventor dies amid mystery

Associated Press

LONDON — It was a riddle worthy of the murder mystery board game Clue. But this time it was not Professor Plum in the parlor with a revolver.

AP-WORLD

Waddington's Games, which owns Clue, recently tried to track down inventor Anthony Pratt to help celebrate the game's 50th anniversary, but struck out.

It eventually offered a reward and set up a special phone line — which brought the information that the former law clerk died two years ago, at age 90, in virtual obscurity.

"We had hoped to find Anthony Pratt alive and well, but we had no idea how old he might be, as the formal agreement ended with him many years ago," a Waddington's spokesman said.

"We understand that his wife is also dead and that the couple were childless. However, we are keeping our fingers crossed for a family member to come forward and accept a posthumous award." The company last heard from Pratt 10 years ago.

Gillian Lewis, superintendent of the Bromsgrove Municipal Cemetery near Birmingham, central England, called Waddington's to say Pratt was buried there in April 1994.

Waddington's at first hoped it may be another Pratt, but accepted the inevitable when Lewis confirmed that the marble headstone bears the inscription "Inventor of Cluedo," the British name of the game.

British media said he died in a Birmingham hospital but did not give the cause of death.

Pratt came up with the Cluedo idea while working as a fire warden during World War II in the northern English city of Leeds.

"Between the wars . . . all the bright young things would congregate in each other's homes for parties at weekends," he told the Birmingham Evening Mail in a 1990 interview.

"We'd play a stupid game called Murder where guests crept up on each other in corridors and the victim would shriek and fall on the floor."

Pratt completed the game in 1947. Clue sold 150 million copies, and Pratt's share of the profits allowed him to leave his job and pursue his true love — playing the piano with an orchestra.

Clue, with its miniature murder weapons and colorful cast of suspects gathered in a Victorian mansion, is Waddington's best-selling game after Monopoly. It also inspired the 1985 movie "Clue."

Hundreds gather for annual tribute to Beatles

Associated Press

BURLINGAME, Calif. — Hundreds of Beatles' fans descended on the San Francisco Bay area this weekend to snatch up memorabilia, watch old news reels of the Fab Four and, of course, listen to their favorite music.

AP-ARTS

For Rusty Goldman, of Pacifica, it was also a time to reflect.

"Did you ever stop and think that with any question in life, you could respond with a line or a name of a Beatles' song?" Goldman said at the three-day event which ended Sunday at the Hyatt Regency in Burlingame.

"The Beatles have helped me live simply and argue less."

The so-called Beatlefest featured a number of aging characters with ties to the group.

On Friday, Shelagh Johnston, who started an early fan club, gave a talk titled, "I Worked For Paul McCartney." Other guests included Laurence Juber, a former Wings guitarist, and Lou Harrison, George Harrison's 65-year-old older sister.

Fans of all ages milled about the hotel.

"Their songs are not like rap songs that are real bad and say bad words," said 9-year-old Lisa Carmichael.

Judith Perkins said she was having a wonderful time as she stuffed a collection of Beatles pens and other memorabilia into a shopping bag. Nearby, three girls strolled by, dressed in homemade costumes from "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

Candles were lit at Madrid's Puerta de Alcala monument in memory of the estimated 5,000 AIDS victims who have died in the Spanish capital.

Brazilians marched on Copacabana beach in Rio de Janeiro and volunteers distributed leaflets and 130,000 condoms in a park in Sao Paulo.

In South Africa, retired Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1984 for his fight against apartheid, appeared in a TV advertisement to warn: "Our wonderful country faces a major crisis with HIV and AIDS spreading so fast. Please use a condom!"

Algeria had another solution. Reminding audiences that AIDS has no cure, state-run media recommended sexual abstinence as the only sure method of avoiding the disease.

Perhaps the most frightened man in town was Ferrell's grandfather, Harold Gibson. But his fears were for his grandson, not of the youth, whom he insisted was not the group's leader. And he said he fears for himself.

"What if they come after me?" Gibson said at his home Saturday, suddenly overcome by tears. "They're saying Rod is a monster. A monster! He's not a monster, he's not."

Harrington was eager to write off the lurid story as an isolated escapade.

"I think you had a group of kids that just wanted to be a part of something, wanted to belong to a group," he said. "And it went too far. Hopefully, it's over."

LA resident chronicles draft resistors in Japanese camps

Swiss narrowly reject anti-immigrant amendment to its constitution

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dozens of Japanese-Americans sent to internment camps in World War II refused to fight for the country that imprisoned them.

AP-STATE

Paul Tsuneishi would like to hear from them.

The 73-year-old Sunland resident is collecting oral histories from the draft resistors.

"My interest in this is not to memorialize the camp experience, which is easy to do," Tsuneishi said, "but rather to use the experience to educate adults and children on how important it is to keep this country's constitutional guarantees alive."

He said at least 63 internees at the Heart Mountain, Wyo. camp where he was interned fought the draft and were sent to federal prison.

Tsuneishi has taken oral histories from six of the resistors, who became known as the "No-No Boys" because they answered no to certain questions on a government-administered loyalty oath.

He hopes that the histories may one day be used at a proposed interpretive center to be built on the site of the Heart Mountain camp.

The resistors were part of the so-called Fair Play movement that sprang up after 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry were sent to 10 internment camps following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The movement called the internments unconstitutional. Lawsuits were filed. At Heart Mountain and other places, some young men resisted being drafted. At least 63 at the camp and 44 at another were convicted of draft evasion and sent to federal prison.

Another seven were convicted of conspiracy against the draft.

"I asked, 'How can I go and fight for a free world, democracy and all that when my family and friends were all incarcerated in this concentration camp being denied the very things I was supposed to fight for?'" recalled Mits Koshiyama of San Jose, one resistor whose oral history Tsuneishi has collected.

Some resistors answered "no" to two questions on a government oath that asked if they would fight for the U.S. and forswear loyalty to the Japanese emperor. They argued that the questions presupposed that they were loyal to the emperor.

Other youths, who enlisted to prove their loyalty to the United States, shunned the No-No Boys.

Tsuneishi, who was drafted, was indifferent to the protestors at the time. He had a change of heart in the 1980s when he learned that his father had supported them.

"Heart Mountain was the only one of the 10 camps where there was an organized resistance," Tsuneishi said. "It's a very important history lesson."

By Bettina Stadelmann
Associated Press

BERN, Switzerland — By a single-digit margin, the Swiss voted down a proposal Sunday to add tough anti-immigration measures to the country's constitution.

AP-WORLD

The vote was 54 percent to 46 percent against the referendum, which would have disqualified all illegal immigrants from refugee status and given the government control over any wages earned by asylum-seekers.

Already under international criticism over allegations that Switzerland is concealing the assets of Nazi Holocaust victims, the government welcomed the rejection of the proposals on refugees.

For a country that prides itself on its humanitarian traditions, the addition of an anti-immigration clause to the constitution would have been an embarrassment to many.

But the narrow result reflected a belief widespread among Swiss citizens that foreigners are squeezing them out of increasingly scarce jobs and are to blame for drug dealing and other crimes.

The Swiss People's Party drew up the immigration initiative in 1991, when Switzerland had a record 42,000 asylum-seekers.

The introduction of more restrictive laws — especially on immigrant employment — helped reduce asylum applications to 17,000 in 1995.

"In practice, we have already achieved what the initiative aims at," the government said in a statement.

Despite Switzerland's long-running recession, voters also threw out proposed new labor laws that would have relaxed restrictions on evening and Sunday work and ended a ban on women working night shifts.

About 67 percent voted against that legislation, which parliament approved earlier this year.

"We have missed a chance to give the economy new impetus," said the Swiss Employers Federation, which maintains that the labor market is too regulated and expensive, forcing businesses to locate elsewhere.

Once regarded as one of Europe's most efficient economies, Switzerland is suffering from a long-running recession, with unemployment hovering at about 5 percent.

Union and church leaders had condemned the labor laws as exploitative.

Voter turnout was 46 percent.

Under Swiss direct democracy, 100,000 signatures on a petition are enough to force a constitutional referendum. The Swiss thus go to the polls about three times a year, and are increasingly suffering from "voter fatigue."

Swiss voters approve heroin distribution

Associated Press

ZURICH, Switzerland — Zurich voters on Sunday endorsed a government program giving heroin to hard-core addicts, heeding claims that the giveaway cuts crime.

The conservative Swiss People's Party had challenged the $4.7 million program, forcing a local vote on it. The vote went 63 percent to 37 percent in favor of the program, part of a nationwide pilot project.

The program is supplying heroin to 100 addicts in Zurich, Switzerland's largest city and once the home of the country's biggest and most open drug scene.

Authorities claim the heroin distribution has eased crime and poverty among addicts, easing their integration back into society. Detractors say it only encourages drug consumption.

The pilot project runs through 1998.

Heart problem lands Olajuwon in hospital again

By Terri Langford
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon checked into a hospital Sunday after the Houston Rockets center had an irregular heartbeat for the second time in less than two weeks.

SPORTS

Olajuwon was reported in "very good condition" at Methodist Hospital, where he had been since about 10:30 a.m. Sunday, hospital spokeswoman Angela McPike said.

Olajuwon, 33, was to be examined Sunday afternoon by team internist Dr. James Muntz.

The star center, who has a history of heart trouble, flew to Houston from Washington early Sunday. He had felt the irregular heartbeat about 2 a.m., just hours after finishing with 34 points and 17 rebounds while playing 39 minutes in the Rockets' 103-99 victory over the Bulls on Saturday night.

"Basically, he played a game last night, got out of the game, went to grab a bite for dinner and felt a little funny in the car on the way back," team spokesman Tim Frank said.

"He went to lay down. We called our trainer, our trainer checked him out and team officials decide it was in the best interest to fly him back and get our own doctors to take a look at him."

The abnormal rhythm, or arrhythmia, appears similar to an episode he had 12 days before and once in 1991, Frank said. Frank said it feels as if the heartbeat "speeds up a little bit, then slows down a little bit."

The Bulls game was Olajuwon's third since missing three games while recovering from his first arrhythmia of the season, which hit Olajuwon during halftime of a home game against Minnesota on Nov. 19.

At that time, he was immediately taken to Methodist, where doctors used a defibrillator to restore proper rhythm. Precautionary tests were administered and he was released two days later.

Rockets team physician Bruce Moseley has said that it's not really known why such arrhythmia occurs, and there's no medicine to prevent it.

Olajuwon had the same problem during the 1991-92 season. The condition returned to normal then after medication.

In 13 games this season, Olajuwon is third in the league in scoring at 25.8 points per game, and his 9.5 rebounds per game are second on the team to Charles Barkley.

Other than the heart condition, Olajuwon also has had anemia, during the 1994-95 season. Before the 1990-91 season he was hospitalized with a blood clot in his left leg, and blood thinners dissolved the clot.

Bell may have tolled for Holtz at Notre Dame

By John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It all seemed so simple — Notre Dame beats Southern California, as the Irish always do, setting up a grand finale for coach Lou Holtz in the Fiesta Bowl or Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

SPORTS

Somebody forgot to tell the Trojans, who were on their own mission.

USC recovered four Notre Dame fumbles and took advantage of a missed conversion to extend the Irish to overtime Saturday night. Then, Brad Otton threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Rodney Sermons to give the Trojans a 27-20 victory.

"My guts feel like someone cut out my complete insides," said a somber Holtz, who announced Nov. 19 he was resigning after the season. "I've never felt this low."

The win snapped a 13-game USC winless streak against Notre Dame, and it may have saved coach John Robinson's job.

It also may have ended Holtz's career one game and one month before everyone connected with the Irish had hoped.

Mike Tyson is No. 1 on athletes' money list

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Forget those big-money contracts in baseball, basketball, football and hockey. Boxer Mike Tyson fought just three times in 1996 and, according to Forbes Magazine, earned $75 million, more money in one year than any athlete ever.

Tyson knocked NBA star Michael Jordan out of the top spot in the Forbes Super 40 list of highest paid athletes announced Sunday.

However, Jordan, No. 1 for four straight years, could be poised for a comeback in 1997. His $30 million contract — the largest one-year salary in sports history — will factor in more next year.

Then there is box office, merchandise and video income from his movie "Space Jam," that could push his earnings past $100 million for next year. Forbes computes Jordan's 1996 income at $52.6 million, $12.6 in salary and $40 million from other sources such as endorsements.

German auto racer Michael Schumacher, who was paid $25 million to drive for Ferrari's Formula One team and made another $8 million in other income, is No. 3, up from ninth a year ago.

Shaquille O'Neal, who signed a $120 million free agent contract with the Los Angeles Lakers last summer, moved up from No. 5 to No. 4 with his total income computed at $24.4 million. Emmitt Smith is the highest paid football player at No. 5 with $16.5 million, $13 million of it from the Dallas Cowboys.

The Forbes list includes nine basketball players, seven boxers, six football players, five baseball players, four auto racers, four golfers, three tennis players and two hockey players. There are no women on the list.

Total income for the Forbes Super 40 went up 13 percent this year, from $490 million to $556 million.

"One of the things we tried to do was drive the basketball, and they think shoot the three, shoot the three," Schneider said. "It extended the defense so it gave us much more of an opportunity to drive the basketball and help the inside game."

Cal Poly senior Shanta Cotright drove the ball hard inside against the Huskies, racking up a game-high 24 points for the night. He later received All-Tournament Team honors for Cal Poly.

Cotright said the team may have had a harder time trying to get up for a game against Fresno State than against Northeastern after losing on the first night.

"We didn't dictate the tempo of the game," Cotright said of the loss to Liberty. "(Last night) was a wake-up call for us."

Sophomore Ross Ketcham also woke up to trail just behind Cotright with 18 points for the night, after hitting only two of 20 shots the night before against Liberty. The team shot 42 percent overall Saturday night.

"Last night I tried to force it too much," Ketcham said about the difference in his performances during the two nights.

The Mustangs pulled away for good, and Schneider enlisted a "four corners" offense to run the clock down, allow the guards to drive to the hoop and put players at the free-throw line.

"I like our four corners, and I think we have really good drivers," Schneider said. "People aren't used to playing four corners."

Northeastern coach Rudy Keeling said his team seemed drained after battling Fresno State the night before.

"Our guys probably left a lot on the court yesterday," Keeling said. "I thought Cal Poly played very, very well."

Keeling suspected the team may have been a little too happy to keep up with Fresno State, even though they still lost the game.

"They felt like they played well last night," Keeling added about Northeastern's first game. "I thought they felt, 'hey we played well' and rested on that. As a coach I gotta change that attitude."

Cal Poly is now 3-1 and will face Cal Baptist in Mott Gym Tuesday night at 7 p.m.

Couples wins second straight Skins Title

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples' game wasn't great, but his timing was.

As Tiger Woods and Tom Watson matched birdie putts and raised the stakes, Couples sneaked in with a 7-foot birdie putt Sunday to win $240,000 and his second consecutive Skins Game title.

The dramatic putt on No. 15, with money carried over from six holes, gave Couples a total of $280,000 for the two-day event.

Watson, at 47 the senior member of the foursome and 27 years older than Woods, played the best golf of the competition. After the final three holes of regulation and one playoff hole were tied, Watson made a 6-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole for $120,000, giving him a $220,000 paycheck for the two days.

Woods, whose presence sparked a big jump in the TV audience for an event that had been fading with age, earned $40,000 by winning one hole on Saturday.

The first day's telecast hit 8.2 in the overnight ratings, 74 percent higher than a year earlier, a Skins official said.

John Daly, the fourth player in the event, outdrove Woods most of the time in the matchup of the PGA Tour's longest hitters. But Daly's putting touch and confidence were shaky, and he won no holes and no money.

Coors tourney a mixed result

By Mark Armstrong
Daily Managing Editor

FRESNO — Coming off an impressive 17-point victory over Loyola Marymount University Tuesday night at Mott Gym, the Cal Poly men's basketball team headed into Fresno State's Coors Light Classic hungry to take on the No. 15 team in the nation led by Jerry Tarkanian.

• Men's Basketball

But a first-round loss to Liberty University of Lynchburg, Va., 67-65, would not let the California matchup between Cal Poly and Fresno State occur.

Mustang head coach Jeff Schneider later rethought his team's readiness for what would have been a huge jump in competition against Fresno State in the tournament final.

"We're 3-1, and I don't think we're ready for Fresno State yet," Schneider said after his team defeated Northeastern University in the consolation round to finish in third place. "Maybe in a year or so when we're a little older, then we'll have a realistic chance. It might not have been a good game for us to play this early in the season."

Fresno State (4-0) went on to throttle Liberty University (3-1) in the championship game, 84-44.

Against Liberty, Cal Poly players faced a slower pace, and had to go head-to-chest against the 6-foot-10, 260-pound preseason All-American from Nigeria, Peter Aluma.

The Mustangs double-teamed the senior center and held close to Liberty in rebounding, and Aluma fouled out with less than three minutes to go. Cal Poly stayed ahead for most of the game and eventually pulled out to a 13-point lead, 44-31, early in the second half off a jumper from senior Damien Levesque.

The lead eventually melted away to a tie at 64 after a lay-up from Liberty forward Walter Graham. Liberty slipped past the Mustangs with 25 seconds to go after a screen on Mustang freshman Mike Wozniak left Liberty's Larry Jackson open to launch a three, keeping Cal Poly down for the final seconds.

"They deserved to win," said a frustrated Schneider after the loss. "We didn't give a big enough effort to win this game. We played tentative; we had an 11-point lead and we blew it. And at the end we gave up an open three.

"You can't give up a three when you're up one," Schneider added about Liberty's game-winning points. "It wasn't contested. That was just poor defense at the time."

On Saturday, the Mustangs pulled themselves together for an 89-73 victory over Northeastern University (0-4). The day before, Northeastern was taken down by Fresno State, 87-71, in the first round of the tournament.

The Mustangs sought to do what had eluded them in their match against Liberty — control the tempo. The slower pace of Liberty allowed Cal Poly to only put up 77 shots Friday night, but the Mustangs picked up the pace against Northeastern by putting up almost 100 shots.

Schneider said the tempo was what made the difference for the team.

"We played Liberty basketball last night and I told our guys today that we have to play Cal Poly basketball," Schneider said. "It's attacking, it's aggressive and it's playing extremely hard and dominating the tempo of the game."

The Mustangs held onto the lead throughout the game, with little help from their three-point shooting and more reliance on the inside game. Cal Poly went six for 30 (20 percent) from beyond the arc.

Mustangs lose two in Nebraska Tournament

Daily Staff Report

The Cal Poly women's basketball didn't fare too well over this holiday weekend, losing two at the Nebraska tournament in Lincoln, Nebraska.

• Women's Basketball

The Mustangs are now 0-4 on the season.

On Friday, Cal Poly lost to St. Louis, 86-62. Freshman guard Stephanie Osorio led the Mustangs with 17 points. Center Rona Bevien followed with 14 of her own.

The Mustangs shot 37 percent from the floor, hitting 13 of 30 in the first half and 12 of 37 in the second half. Cal Poly had 22 turnovers while St. Louis had 18.

In the consolation game against Bucknell University of Lewisburg, PA on Saturday, Cal Poly lost 64-55. Rona Bevien led the Mustangs with 13 points. Guards Rae Anne Yip and Kristie Barnes both had nine points.

The Mustangs were only down by three at the half but shot only 30 percent from the floor in the second half. Cal Poly also had 27 turnovers and 26 personal fouls while Bucknell only had 20 turnovers and 15 personal fouls.

The Mustangs did well from the free throw line all weekend, hitting 68 percent of their shots against both St. Louis and Bucknell.

On Dec. 6, the Mustangs host the Holiday Inn Express Tournament. Cal Poly will compete against Idaho State, Colorado State and Fresno Pacific for the title.

The women's basketball team lost two games at the Nebraska Tournament over the break.
